

mately 160,000, to 3.48 million in 2015. Net migration from the surrounding area remained negative, meaning more people moved from Berlin to the surrounding area than the other way around. This development goes hand-in-hand with the continually increasing number of commuters.

The number of one-person house-holds is increasing particularly quickly, accounting for 55 percent of all house-holds. In 1999, they only accounted for 47 percent.

You can obtain further information on basic structural data for Berlin at www.statistik-berlin-brandenburg.de www.stadtentwicklung.berlin.de/umwelt/umweltatlas and nationwide data at www.destatis.de (Federal Statistics Office)

www.bbsr.bund.de
 (Federal Institute for Research on Building, Urban Affairs and Spatial Development)

¹⁾ Annual average according to the micro-census based on the current government population projection and the census of 9 May 2011